

Contents

Preface, xi

Chapter One. General Introduction 1

- 1 Modernization, 2
  - 1.1 Emergence of Instrumental Rationality, 2
  - 1.2 Differentiation and Individualization: Deterrents to Political Action, 4
- 2 Pluralism, Polyarchy, and Incrementalism, 7
- 3 Doubts about Incrementalism and Polyarchy in Political Science, 9
- 4 Political Endorsement of Polyarchy and Incrementalism, 12
- 5 Questions, 15

Chapter Two. Max Weber 17

- 1 Personal and Intellectual Background, 18
- 2 Weber's Philosophy of Science, 21
  - 2.1 The Difference between the Natural and the Human Sciences, 22
  - 2.2 The Endless Growth of Knowledge and the Disenchantment of Our Worldview, 24
  - 2.3 Science and Normative Questions, and What Science Can Actually Do, 25
- 3 Capitalism and the Rationalization of Occidental Culture, 28
  - 3.1 Forms of Rationality, 29

- 3.2 The Rationalization of More and More Spheres of Life, 32
- 3.3 Ascetic Protestantism as Breeding Ground for Capitalism, 34
- 3.4 The Capitalist Ethic in Capitalism's Iron Cage, 36
- 4 Bureaucracy and Bureaucratization, 38
  - 4.1 Description of Bureaucracy and the Bureaucrat, 38
  - 4.2 The Driving Forces behind Bureaucratization, 40
  - 4.3 The Endless Persistence of an Established Bureaucracy, 44
- 5 Democracy in Modern Society, 45
  - 5.1 The Bureaucratization of the Political Party, 46
  - 5.2 Leadership, Demagoguery, and "Public Opinion," 48
  - 5.3 The Functions of Parliament, 50
  - 5.4 The Charismatic Leader as Counterweight to Bureaucratization, 52
  - 5.5 The "Verantwortungsethik" of the True Politician, 64
- 6 Preliminary Assessment, 55

Chapter Three. Karl Mannheim 61

- 1 Personal and Intellectual Background, 61
- 2 The Reception of Mannheim, 64
- 3 Science and Society, 66
  - 3.1 The Sociology of Knowledge, 67
  - 3.2 Relativism or Relationism, 69
  - 3.3 Sozial Freischwebende Intelligenz and the Possibilities for a Political Science, 70
  - 3.4 Qualitative Research and Interdisciplinarity, 74
  - 3.5 The Elites: Their Lack of Social Engagement and Their Decline, 76
- 4 Some Fundamental Assumptions and Concepts of the Sociology of Planning, 78
  - 4.1 The Unbalanced Growth and Social Distribution of Moral and Technical Capacity, 78
  - 4.2 Substantial and Functional Rationality and Morality, 80
  - 4.3 The Awareness of the Need for Planning, 82
  - 4.4 The Planning of Personalities and the End of History, 86
- 5 Planning for Freedom, 88
  - 5.1 Our Ambivalent Attitude toward Planning and the Functionalistic Manner of Thinking, 88
  - 5.2 Concentration of Power through Application of Social Techniques, 89
  - 5.3 The Creation of Indispensable Social Consensus with Social Techniques, 90
  - 5.4 Some Techniques of Social Control, 91
  - 5.5 The Pros and Cons of Various Possible Techniques of Control, 94
  - 5.6 Controlling the Planners by Way of Parliamentary Democracy, 96
  - 5.7 Is Planning Possible in a Divided Pluriform Democracy?, 97
  - 5.8 Planning Means More Technical and Less Political Decision-Making, 99
  - 5.9 Planning Makes a Higher Collective Form of Freedom Possible, 100

- 6 Mannheim's Diagnosis of Our Ethical Situation, 102
  - 6.1 The Complete Absence of Social Consensus on Values and the Causes Thereof, 102
  - 6.2 The Third Way in the Ethical Field: A Militant Democracy, 106
  - 6.3 Religion and the Substance of a Shared, Unifying Goal, 107
- 7 Preliminary Assessment, 109

Chapter Four. Joseph Schumpeter 114

- 1 Personal Background, 116
- 2 Standpoints on Science, Economics, and History, 119
  - 2.1 Positivism, Historicism, and General Social Science, 119
  - 2.2 Economic Thought, 121
  - 2.3 Marx and the Economic Interpretation of History, 123
  - 2.4 Schumpeter's Definition of Conservatism, 124
- 3 The Decline of Capitalism, 125
  - 3.1 Capitalism Is a Great Economic Success, 126
  - 3.2 The Economic Success of Capitalism Is No Coincidence, 127
  - 3.3 The Process of Creative Destruction Is the Engine of Economic Progress, 128
  - 3.4 Monopolistic Practices Are Often Beneficial to the Economy, 129
  - 3.5 The Capitalistic Economy Can Also Keep Growing in the Future, 130
  - 3.6 Capitalistic Civilization and the Rationalization Process, 131
  - 3.7 Capitalism Destroys Its Own Institutional Framework, 134
  - 3.8 Capitalism Makes More and More Enemies, 136
    - 3.8.1 People Are Unable to Evaluate Capitalism Rationally, 136
    - 3.8.2 Intellectuals and Their Subversive Activities, 137
  - 3.9 The Collapse of the Family, the Country Place, and Capitalism, 139
- 4 The Socialist Economic System Works, 141
  - 4.1 The Sound Rationality of a Socialist Economy, 142
  - 4.2 The Socialist Economic Order Is More Rational Than the Capitalist, 145
  - 4.3 Socialist Man Need Not Be Either a Genius or a Saint, 147
  - 4.4 The Gradual but Inevitable Transition to Socialism, 149
    - 4.4.1 Two Conditions, 150
    - 4.4.2 The Options for Socialists in a Society That Is Still Capitalist, 151
- 5 Socialism and Democracy, 154
  - 5.1 In Search of a Definition of Democracy, 154
    - 5.1.1 Democracy Is Not a Value in Itself but a Decision Method, 154
    - 5.1.2 The Electorate Determines Who Belongs to the Electorate, 155
    - 5.1.3 A Government by the People Is Already Technically Impossible, 156
  - 5.2 Criticism of the "Classical" Theory of Democracy, 158
    - 5.2.1 The Common Good Does Not Exist, nor Does the Will of the People, 158
    - 5.2.2 The Citizens Are Irrational and Easily Influenced, 159
    - 5.2.3 Abstraction Undermines Responsibility and Rationality, 160

- 5.2.4 The Will of the People Is the Artificial Product of Manipulation, 162
- 5.2.5 Why an Untenable Theory Is Upheld, 163
- 5.3 An Alternative Conception of Democracy, 164
  - 5.3.1 The Suitability of a Democracy Depends on the Circumstances, 166
  - 5.3.2 Five Social Conditions for a Successful Democracy, 167
- 5.4 A Socialist Democracy Will Not Differ Much from a Capitalist, 169
- 6 Making Up the Balance, 170
  - 6.1 Ideology and the Science of Economics, 170
  - 6.2 How Inevitable Is the “Inevitable” March into Socialism?, 174
  - 6.3 The Interest of Managers in Capitalism, 178
  - 6.4 The Positive Political Freedom of Leaders and Citizens, 179
  - 6.5 Schumpeter’s Relativism and Strictly Formal Definition of Democracy, 181

Chapter Five. Synthesis: The Modernization of Politics and Society 183

- 1 The Rationalization Perspective, 184
  - 1.1 The Spread of the Critical Rational Spirit, 185
  - 1.2 Instrumental and Functional Rationality Versus Value and Substantial Rationality, 186
  - 1.3 Industrialization, Capitalism, and the Dominant Functional Rationality, 187
  - 1.4 Bureaucracy as Product and Catalyst of Functional Rationality, 189
  - 1.5 Explanation of the Growth and Spread of Bureaucratic Organizations, 191
  - 1.6 The Appraisal of Bureaucratic Organizations and Government Interventions, 192
- 2 Rationalization and Politics, 193
  - 2.1 The End of Big Politics, 193
  - 2.2 The Endless Small Politics, 194
  - 2.3 Our Lack of Imagination, 195
- 3 Democracy and the Entry of the Masses into the Political Arena, 197
  - 3.1 The Inevitable Consequences of Enlarging the Scale of Politics, 199
  - 3.2 Are There Democratic Alternatives to Parliamentary Democracy?, 200
  - 3.3 The Neutrality Principle of Liberal Democracy, 202
  - 3.4 Trapped in the Emancipation Dilemma?, 203
- 4 What to Do?, 205

Notes, 211

Bibliography, 241

Index, 251