

Contents

Preface	xi
List of Maps	xiv
Acknowledgments	xv
Prologue: The Fish that Might Save Seattle	1
1. All the Forces of Nature Are on Their Side: The Unraveling of the Mixed World	12
2. The Work Which Nature Had Left Undone: Making Private Property on the Waterfront Commons	44
3. The Imagination and Creative Energy of the Engineer: Harnessing Nature's Forces to Urban Progress	86
4. Out of Harmony with the Wild Beauty of the Natural Woods: Artistry Versus Utility in Seattle's Olmsted Parks	119
5. Above the Weary Cares of Life: The Benefits and High Social Price of Outdoor Leisure	154
6. Junk-Yard for Human Junk: The Unnatural Ecology of Urban Poverty	180
7. Death for a Tired Old River: Ecological Restoration and Environmental Inequity in Postwar Seattle	203
8. Masses of Self-Centered People: Salmon and the Limits of Ecotopia in Emerald City	230

Epilogue: The Geography of Hope: Toward an Ethic of Place and a City of Justice	265
Notes	281
Index	323

Photograph galleries appear following pages 76 and 172