

Contents

---

Acknowledgments	xi
List of References and Abbreviations	xiii
Introduction	1
Chapter One. Tolstoy and the Twenty-first Century	7
Tolstoy today, 9. Theoretical and practical knowledge, 13. Astronomy and utopia, 16. God substitutes, 20. Contingency and presentness, 23. Decisions in a world of uncertainty, 25. Complexity and impurity, 26. Tolstoy and the realist novel of ideas, 27. The prosaic novel, 28. Fallacies of perception and plot, 30. Prosaics, 31.
Chapter Two. Dolly and Stiva: Prosaic Good and Evil	33
Happiness, 35. Two bad lives, 35. Overcoming the bias of the artifact, 36. Retraining perception, 37. The third story, 38. The prosaic hero, 38. Dolly's quandary, 40. Habits, 41. Arriving at a question (Part Six, chapter 16), 42. Looking is an action, 44. Work, 45. Stiva and the Russian idea of evil, 48. Negligence and negative events, 49. The forgettory, 50. Honesty, 51. Fatalism and blame, 52. He had never clearly thought out the subject, 53.
Chapter Three. Anna	55
Introduction to a Contrary Reading	57
Part One. Anna and the Kinds of Love	62
Murder an infant (a Tolstoyan meditation), 62. Fatality, 63. Narcissism, 65. Marrying Romeo, 68. Love and work, 68. Why they quarrel, 69. Broderie anglaise , 70. Eroticism and dialogue, 71. The prosaic sublime, 72. Kitty's mistake, 74. Crises, 75. The word love, 76. The second proposal and how it works, 77. Tiny alterations, 77.

Part Two. Anna and the Drama of Looking 79

Honesty, continued, 79. Fake simplicity, 79. What touches Dolly the most, 81. Relativity, 82. Ears, 84. Narrating from within, 85. Mimicry, 88. Some strategic absences, 88. Aleksey Aleksandrovich plans a conversation, 89. Lying without speaking, 92. Their past marriage, 93. The Pallisers at breakfast, 95. The shortest chapter, 97. Vronsky, 97. Vronsky's attempted suicide, 98. Vronsky's loathing, 101. Vronsky tries to talk, 102. Responsibility at a remove, 104. Races and circuses, 105. What Anna sees and what Tolstoy says, 106. Watching watching watching, 108. A false confession, 108. For the first time, 109. I tried to hate, 111. The only character who saves a life, 112. Divorce and the children, 113. Why Anna refuses a divorce, 115.

Part Three. Anna's Suicide and the Totalism of Meaning 118

Nothing but love, 118. Dehumanizing Anna, 119. Impurity and inconsistency, 120. The temptation to allegory, 121. Frou-Frou's suicide? 123. The dynamics of quarrels, 124. Why the epigraph is troubling, 127. Two interpretations of the epigraph, and an unexpected third one, 129. Totalism and isolation, 130. Contrary evidence? 132. Anna the philosopher, 133. The madness of reason and the choice of fatalism, 134. Foreshadowing, 135. Annie, 136. The red bag, 137. The epigraph's fourth meaning, 138.

Chapter Four. Levin 141

Part One. Why Reforms Succeed or Fail 143

The significance of Russian history, 143. Toryism and Whiggism, 145. St. Petersburg, 145. Aristocracy, 146. Duty and culture, 147. A strange sort of duty, 148. Levin's book, 149. What Is Agriculture? 150. The root cause, 151. Friction, 152. The elemental force, 154. Why the elemental force cannot be resisted, 155. Why minds wander, 156. Learning to mow, 157. Reform by template, 158. How reforms can take, 159. When asymmetry works, 160. Discounting history, 161. Untangling the labyrinth of possibilities, 163. Destructive conservatism, 164. Disciplines, 165. War and Peace vs. Anna Karenina, 166. Speed, 167.

Part Two: Levin's Idea, Its Corollaries and Analogues: Self-improvement, Christian Love, Counterfeit Art, and Authentic Thinking 168

Extending Levin's idea, 168. Three ways not to answer, 169. Kitty and self-improvement, 171. The fake way to avoid being fake, 175. Karenin and Christian love, 176. The sound of listening, 177. The terror of pity, 178. The accompanying message, 179. The stages of comprehension, 180. Wishing her dead, 181. Eavesdropping on vindication, 183. He did not think, 185. Christian love and the elemental force, 186. No escape, 188. Christian love and prosaic goodness,

188. Counterfeit art. What is interesting? 190. Counterfeit thinking and Sergey Ivanovich's beliefs, 192. How Stiva's opinions change, 193. Svyazhsky and magic words, 194. One's own thought, 196.

Part Three. Meaning and Ethics 197

The Svyazhsky enigma, 197. An unbeliever's prayer, 198. Two problems, 199. Why there are many problems, 200. The Svyazhsky enigma in its sharpest form, 202. The sole solution to all the riddles of life and death is untrue, 203. Fleming, 203. What is "incontestably necessary," 204. Levin's casuistry, 205. The moral wisdom of the realist novel, 208. The wisdom of behavior, 209. Wisdom does not come from the peasant, 209. Given without proof, 210. Miracle and narrative, 212. Why vision is not singular, 213. Dostoevsky answers Tolstoy, 214. The first Tolstoyan reply: Moral distance, 217. The second Tolstoyan reply, and three maxims about social judgments, 217. The third Tolstoyan reply: Theoretical illustrations vs. novelistic cases, 218. The fourth Tolstoyan reply: Galileo and Dolly, 218. The fifth Tolstoyan reply: Presence, 219. A still more senseless prayer and a new mistaken question, 220. The meaning of meaningfulness, 221.

One Hundred Sixty-Three Tolstoyan Conclusions 223

Notes 235

Index 245